

A note from Eaglesham School Council Chair

Here we are back at the start of another school year. There has been a lot happening at the school as well as away from it and a great way to keep informed is by coming to our School Council meetings. It is an opportunity to stay in touch with the curriculum and programs where our kids spend so much of their time and energy. In the 14 years I have been attending council meetings I have been surprised at how few parents take advantage of this information time. I wonder if there are some misconceptions of what happens at these meetings so I will try to make it clearer.

It is not a place to discuss specific students and their problems.

It is not a place to discuss teacher problems.

It is not a place of conflict.

It is a place to hear about curriculum changes.

It is a place to hear what various classes and groups are involved in.

It is a place to hear from our School Board representative on a variety of Board issues.

As parents do you know what changes have been made to the language arts program this year in the elementary end?

Do you know what AISI stands for and what they do?

Have you seen the curriculum lay out for k-12?

If you would like to know more about what our school is about we would invite you to come out to School Council meetings. The next one is the annual meeting on Monday, October 19 in the staff room. Please join us.
